This is more than a slight annoyance because it makes one feel as though they are a burglar stealing content from their home. This is especially annoying with the Apple TV since its purpose is to stream content to a big screen TV. Now there are lots of ways to send content through the Apple TV, but the one recommended method is AirPlay. So why not allow other platforms to access the content in a similar way? AirPlay is an excellent capability, but it's not a suitable replacement for programmatic and comprehensive access to television content. Often, we see the story of a photographer and videographer being asked to shoot an official and event. The photographer will get them what they want, but then expects to be paid. It's a common misconception that if you shoot with an iPhone, you can apply to join a freelance team and get paid for each job. The entire experience of being a contractor is entirely demoralizing. You will forget about the people you were praying at your wedding at first. You will not think about the people you are serving coffee with at events. No matter what the checks you might earn are, you will always feel like you are being kicked in the gut when you get to do certain projects. Applying to be a contractor isn't all that different than filing taxes for your business. A lot of times, there is a road to haggling in which you get paid less than your actual value to the business. It gives the impression that you are outside of the company's circle and it will not be out of bad faith that they would not pay you.
